Open Hearts

When Jesus told the parable of the farmer sowing the seed, he was reflecting his own experience as a teacher. His preaching had widely different results. Some of those listening were simply curious; his message went in one ear and out the other. Some found him stimulating at first, but they were too shallow to accept his challenge and apply his words to their own lives. Others were too busy, too caught up with the cares of life to give him much attention. And then there were those whose minds were open; they recognized him for what he was- the greatest teacher of all times- and they took his teaching to heart. The difference was not in their minds but in their hearts: they were open ready for something new, something that would change their lives for the better.

We like to think that we belong to the latter group. The fact that we are in church at the moment, listening to the word of God, is a good indication that maybe we do. But then we ask ourselves, how much difference does Jesus make in my life.

God tries to speak to us in so many ways, not just in the bible, but also in the events and the people in my life. Often, I am too busy to take time to listen. And then there are the good times, when the good me shows up!! Think about it. Fr James DiGiacomo SJ.
